

Irish Catholic Churches of Rural Quebec

Arthabaska – Compton - Frontenac – Mégantic – Wolfe Counties

The churches

Buckinghamshire - A vast territory created in 1763 which extended from the Seigneurie of St. Giles (Lotbinière County today) in the east to the Richelieu Valley in the west, south to the US border and north to the various seigneuries located on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River from Sorel on the Richelieu to Lévis across from Québec City. Some of the earliest church records of the pioneer families from Scotland, Northern Ireland, England and Ireland might indicate the name of Buckinghamshire as their place of residence. By 1791, the territory of Buckinghamshire no longer existed; it was replaced in part by the county of Buckingham. In 1829, the latter was subdivided into the 6 counties of Sherbrooke, Mégantic, Lotbinière, Drummond, Nicolet and Yamaska.

Arthabaska County

Arthabaska is a deformation of an Abenaki word Ayabaskaw. In 1792, the county was part of Buckinghamshire, which extended to the US border to the south, the Richelieu River to the west, the various seigneuries established along the St. Lawrence from Sorel to Lévis to the north and the Chaudière River to the east. In 1829 Drummond County was created from this vast domain and in 1855 Arthabaska County was created. It was served by Catholic Missionaries from 1840 to 1848 in the townships of Blandford, Maddington, Aston, Bulstrode, Somerset, Stanford, Arthabaska and Warwick. The civil registers from 1840 to 1844 can be found among those of the parish of Saint Louis de Blandford and the records covering 1845 to 1847 are among those of the parish of Saint Norbert (Norbertville)

Compton County

In the aftermath of the American Revolution, English colonists spread further north along the Connecticut River from regions to the south. As early as 1792, a number of American Loyalists had settled into the area and establish villages such as; Huntingville (1814), Milby (early 1790's), Compton Village (1874), Coaticook (1830), St-Hermenégilde (1830's), East Hereford (1818), Sawyerville (1793) and Eaton Corner (1824). The first Catholic Church in the county was organized in 1855

Frontenac County

in 1848, Father Bernard O'Reilly published a series of articles that described the lack of Irish Catholic Missions throughout the Eastern Townships and regions east and north of the region. These articles were reproduced in various newspapers in cities such as Montréal, Québec and Trois Rivières. Father O'Reilly's petition was most likely the overture required to launch the establishment of Irish Catholic Missions in the Eastern Townships. The first such mission was established in 1848 in Roxton Falls.

Mégantic County

In the 1847-1855 time-frame, both Mégantic and Lotbinière experienced a substantial influx of Irish immigrants. In 1831, the population of Mégantic County totaled 2200 individuals, 85% Protestants, 9% Irish Catholics, 6% French Catholics. Unfortunately, some of the regions of Mégantic and Lotbinière were not ideal for farming, the soil was poor and rocky, many of the farms were settled on hilly fields, definitely not a suitable solution for modern farming practices, which resulted in a migration within two generations to more fertile and larger farms in Southern Ontario, the Prairie Provinces, the States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas and others.
