

The parishes

Vieux Québec (Old Quebec) - Notre Dame Cathedral (1728 to 1818) – This church was founded in 1621. About 1728, under the French Regime, a few Irish, British or Scottish settlers were known to worship here. After 1760, under the British Regime, the cathedral served many Irish, Scottish and English parishioners. As of the 1820s, mass was celebrated in both English and French. Prior to the establishment of St. Patrick's in 1833, Notre-Dame Cathedral, Notre-Dame de la Garde, Notre-Dame de Saint-Roch and Notre-Dame des Victoires were all known as Irish churches.

Quebec City's Augustines - Hôtel-Dieu Hospital (Hôpital général de Québec) (1728) – From as early as 1639, this hospital run by nuns became the main civil and military hospital in New France.

Haymarket Square (Lower Quebec) - Saint Patrick's Day (1765) - The Quebec Gazette account of Saint Patrick's Day events in 1765 read in part: "...besides the divine service, entertainment and toasts will be held at the tavern, followed on the Monday night by a ball." It appears that the festivities were held at Hugh Maguire's Shamrock Inn near the Haymarket. This suggests that, by 1765, the Irish settlers in Québec City had grown into a substantial community.

Vieux Québec (Old Québec) - Chapel of the Congregationalists - Jesuit Fathers (1822) - Rev. Simon Lawlor, presiding. From about 1822 to 1826, church services for the Irish Catholics were held at the Congregational Chapel, then located within the walls of the Convent of the Jesuit Fathers on Esplanade Hill (d'Auteuil). Marriages, baptisms and burials were conducted at Notre Dame Cathedral.

Vieux Québec (Old Quebec) - Notre Dame des Victoires (Diamond Harbour Chapel) (1824) – First organized in 1608 and located next to the Port of Quebec, in 1824, this parish became a separate congregation for the Irish immigrants. Father Patrick McMahon, presiding. Irish settlers supplied much of the labour on the docks and built many of Quebec's best-known landmarks. The Irish called this church Diamond Harbour Chapel. Church registers are found in Notre Dame Cathedral records.

Sainte Foy - Notre Dame de Foy (1831) – First organized in 1679, this parish welcomed its first Irish parishioners in 1831. Rev. Henry Harkin, Rev. Alexander E. Maguire, presiding. The church burned down in 1977. Prior to that, it was the third focal point of the Irish community of Quebec City. The region of Sainte Foy, along with nearby Sillery and Cap Rouge, is still to this day, the bedroom community of the well-educated citizens.

Saint Roch Ward - Notre Dame de Saint-Roch (1831) – First organized in 1829, this parish welcomed its first Irish family in 1831. By 1851, the Irish population of Quebec City had climbed to 9100, an 800% increase over 30 years. Saint Roch Ward in Lower Quebec City became the home to the second largest community of Irish families in the area. Church registers can be found under Notre-Dame de Québec Cathedral.

Vieux Québec (Old Quebec) - Notre Dame des Anges (1831) – First organized in 1728, this chapel was located within the Québec City Hospital (Hôpital Général) and, as such, it welcomed many of the new-born Irish children as early as 1831. Church registers under Hôpital Général de Québec.

Haute Ville (Upper Town) - Saint-Patrick Church (1832) – Founded in 1832 and first located on McMahon Street, close to Hôtel Victoria. Organized for the special use of the Irish Catholic population by the celebrated Father Patrick McMahon. The first mass was celebrated on July 7th, 1833. In 1833, the number of parishioners of Saint Patrick numbered more than 6000.

Haute Ville (Upper Town) - Cholera Burying Ground (1832) - The cemetery located on Grande Allée was opened during the year of the first cholera in 1832, and was in use until 1856. In 1832 alone, the cholera epidemic killed 3,451 individuals, the majority of whom were Irish.

Vieux Québec (Old Quebec) - Saint Luke (Marine Hospital Catholic Mission) (1847) – Compared with other much larger hospitals of the region, Saint Luke appears to have been the hospital of the Irish community. In 1847, hundreds of Irish immigrants who had been deemed to be in good health at the Grosse Île Quarantine Station, downstream on the St. Lawrence River, were confirmed with the dreaded disease of the typhus. A substantial number of these Irish emigrants would succumb from this plague in various hospitals of the region including Saint Luke. See also Grosse Île (further down)

Beauport – Nativity of Notre Dame (1854) - First organized in 1673. In an 1832 document prepared by the Immigration Agent at the Port of Québec, Beauport was listed as being a choice destination of would-be Irish settlers. I was able to ascertain that the first Irish marriage took place in 1854, which might indicate that Irish marriages, baptisms and burials were conducted at nearby Notre Dame Cathedral.

<http://www.leseglisesdemonquartier.com/843.html>

Sillery - Saint-Colomban of Sillery (Saint-Michael) (1855) - The second Irish Church in Québec City – Rev. Peter Henry Harkin, a priest from Ireland, was the first pastor of the new church from 1855. His successor, Father Alexander Eustace Maguire, requested and served as Pastor of the Catholic Mission at Grosse-Île in 1871. His uncle, Bishop E. J. Horan, served as pastor at the Island Mission in 1847. Father Maguire did not survive the ordeal of Grosse Île. The church no longer exists, it has been replaced by Saint-Michael of Sillery

Vieux Québec (Old Quebec) - Saint Brigid's Home (1856) – An institution to help orphans, the destitute and the elderly. First organized in Old Quebec, in 1858 it moved to the vast plot of land occupied by the cholera cemetery at the corner of Grande Allée and Avenue de Salaberry.

Champlain Ward – Chapel of Our Lady of Perpetual Help - The Irish Chapel - Notre-Dame de la Garde (1860) – Located from about 1860 in a former school for Irish boys, this chapel was located near the Port of Quebec, on Champlain Street. This church was the second home to many of the Irish dock workers. The region was also known as the Cove or Cap Blanc (White Cove) and the Irish referred to it as Champlain Ward. Many of the Irish workers of that region worked at the nearby Bell & Taylor Shipyards, building ships. The many wharves along the St. Lawrence River in Lower Town were the landing places of the immigrants between 1814 and the early 1920s. All marriages, baptisms and burials would have been carried-out at Saint Patrick or Notre Dame Cathedral.

Vieux Québec (Old Quebec) - Sacred Heart Hospital (1874) – From 1874 to 1935, Irish baptisms and marriages were performed in the Hospital Chapel. Church registers can be found among those of Notre-Dame Cathedral.

Saint Jean Baptiste Ward - Saint John the Baptist (Saint Jean-Baptiste) (1886) – First opened in 1860, the region consisted of blue-collar tenements. French Canadians and Irish families inter-married as early as 1886.

Cap Rouge - Saint Félix (1889) – First organized in 1862 and located west of Sainte Foy and Sillery, this farming community was blessed with fertile land along the shores of the St. Lawrence River. I was able to trace the first Irish marriage at the parish in 1889.

Grosse Île

In the spring of 1847, a ship brought 241 miserable immigrants fleeing the Great Famine of Ireland. They anchored off Grosse Île, an island below Québec City where immigrants with typhus, cholera, and smallpox were quarantined. The Irish immigrants had brought an epidemic that eventually spread throughout Canada. In the cemetery below Telegraph Hill on Grosse Île stands a monument which says: “In this secluded spot lie the mortal remains of 5424 persons who, fleeing from pestilence and famine in Ireland in the year 1847, found in America but a grave”

North Shore of the St. Lawrence

Between 1820 and 1830, the Irish immigrants moved into Portneuf County and joined the Scottish Protestants who had previously established the area some 20 years prior. Towns such as Sainte Catherine of Jacques Cartier, Saint Gabriel of Valcartier, Shannon, Tewksbury, Stoneham and Lake Beauport became the new homes of the Irish in these northern communities.

<http://www.pbalkcom.com/valcartier/index.htm>

Portneuf County

Many North Americans of Irish descent will tell you that their Irish ancestors first lived in the Portneuf region near Quebec City. The region attracted Irish and Scottish farmers as early as 1816. The quality of the land is fertile and ideal for small farm owners. Portneuf County is located along the northern shores of the St. Lawrence River, slightly upstream and west of Quebec City. The leading Irish communities of Portneuf County and nearby Quebec County were Sainte Catherine of Jacques Cartier (1832), Wexford Road of St. Gabriel of Valcartier (1820), Saint Gabriel of Valcartier (1820), Stoneham (1824), St. Dunstan (1830), Pont Rouge (1834) with surrounding communities such as Portneuf, St. Raymond, St. Basile, St. Christine and others. Most were farming communities with 50-acre farms. The region in the 1830's was a primary destination for Irish farmers with a North American destination who were willing to settle on a small acreage.

Genealogy of Valcartier, Quebec – Patricia Balkcom

<http://www.pbalkcom.com/valcartier/index.htm>

Deschambault (Portneuf) – Saint Joseph (1798) - In 1832, the Government of Lower Canada issued a document addressed to Irish settlers arriving at the Port of Quebec, suggesting that Portneuf County was a prime destination for Irish homesteaders. The region's towns included Deschambault, Tewksbury, Val Cartier, Beauport, Stoneham, Jacques Cartier and the town of Portneuf.

Shannon of Jacques Cartier – Saint-Joseph’s Mission (1830) - The Shannon mission church no longer exists, but the small Irish community is still active to this day and some of their parishioners are members of the Québec City Region of English Speaking Religious Organizations, which includes Protestant and Catholic church groups.

<http://www.pbalkcom.com/valcartier/index.htm>

Saint Catherine of Jacques Cartier - Sainte-Catherine (1832) – This parish had the largest congregational base of Irish parishioners in Portneuf County; the first Irish marriage occurred in 1832.

Fossambault of Portneuf & Pont Rouge – Saint Patrick (1832) – Between 1821 and 1828, the Seigneurie of Fossambault granted acreage suitable for farming to Andrew Wilson, George Thompson, John McCord and James Morrow on the Brulé Range. These four families were the first Irish settlers west of St. Catherine of Portneuf.

Saint Augustin – Saint Augustin (1845) – First organized in 1691 and located along the banks of the St. Lawrence River, just west of Cap Rouge, Sainte Foy and Sillery. The region in the 1800's was most likely the best fertile land for farming in the Quebec City region. To this day, large farms are still operational. The first Irish settlers in the region worshipped at this church from about 1845 onward.

Tewksbury – Saint James (Saint-Jacques) (1865) – The region was first served by a mission as early as 1865, most likely as a mission of Stoneham or Saint Gabriel of Jacques Cartier. Only in 1921 did the church of Saint James opened its doors. The church still exists today, although it is only open during the summer months. Tewksbury was decreed by the management of the Port of Quebec in 1832 as a recommended destination for would-be Irish homesteaders. Please note that the town of Tewksbury is part of the County of Quebec, but the town has been associated with Portneuf County by many family lineages researchers.

Québec County

This county encompasses the towns and villages of L'Ancienne-Lorette, Lac Beauport, Quebec City, Saint-Gabriel-de-Valcartier, Stoneham-et-Tewkesbury, Wendake and others.

<http://www.pbalkcom.com/valcartier/index.htm>

Loretteville – Saint-Ambroise (1818) - As early as 1818, a few Irish families settled at Loretteville near present-day Québec International Airport.

Stoneham - Saint-Edmond of Stoneham (1824) - As early as 1817, Irish families, in addition to American families from Connecticut and Scottish and British families, were settling the area. The town of Stoneham was recommended in the early 1830's by the British authorities as a destination of choice for Irish immigrants who wanted to settle on their own small farms

Beauport & Côte-de-Beaupré Region

The region of Beauport is located east and north of Québec City and its northern limit is adjacent to the eastern limit of Portneuf County. These two regions located north of Québec City were first settled by Scottish immigrants between 1780 and 1790 to be followed from about 1820 to 1830 by Irish farmers. Most of the farms allocated were small, less than 25 acres in a mountainous region, not suited for the raising of large crops. The latter does explain the exit of many of the Irish and Scots within three generations to better lifestyles in southern Québec, Ontario, the West and the U.S.A. Said region included the villages of Château-Richer, L'Ange-Gardien, Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré, Sainte-Brigitte-de-Laval, Cap-Tourmente.

Ste-Brigitte de Laval - Sainte Brigitte de Laval (1834) – Located slightly north of Lake Beauport, the first settlers to the parish were Irish in the early 1830's. Although the town of Sainte Brigitte de Laval is located within the county of Montmorency, its northern region is located next to Portneuf County, so the two regions have been closely associated.
